Message from Honda

Welcome to the second issue of With Dreams for 2018. I am humbled to address our readers as the new Group Head of Sales and After Sales Honda Malaysia, and announce the company's overall sales performance in the first quarter of 2018. We sold more than 24,100 units from January to March 2018, which helps us maintain the No. 1 position in the Non-National segment and No. 2 in the overall TIV.

Thank you for your trust and support.

Working with Honda for 13 years has allowed me to accomplish many goals while leading various divisions, each of which has brought valuable insights and lessons that still resonate with me as I embark on a new and bigger role today. Starting at the Call Centre and working hard to get here made me realise that anyone can do it - you don't have to limit yourself just because you are a woman.

While I don't rely on luck to drive one's dreams, I count my blessings to have come so far in a company like Honda. Unifying and aligning our sales and after sales teams remain our top priority in order for us to deliver a consistent, high quality experience to all customers as we strive for better loyalty and retention.

Your growing support has led to much advancement within Honda and we will continue to serve you with pride. The essence of Honda Pride is best shared by some of our top-performing Service Advisors, which you can read about inside this magazine and I urge you to browse through the other interesting topics that we have put together. I sincerely hope that you will continue your journey with Honda.

Thank you for reading.

Malaysia's Mesmerising Mosques

The mosques of Malaysia are more than just holy places of prayer and preaching; its designs are architectural wonders worthy of admiration.

Ubudiah Mosque,
Kuala Kangsar, Perak

Image by iStockphoto

In Islam, mosques are a place of worship. A spiritual sanctuary and communal space that serves its surrounding populace, they are also symbols of knowledge and learning. Their design and architecture often reflect the cultural aspirations of a place and time. Beyond the domes and minarets, many architects have stretched the limits of their skills to create stunning masterpieces.

With Dreams has listed here just a small cross selection of mosques across the country worth stopping at. Most receive visitors, but be sure to check prayer times and dress appropriately – covering the legs, arms and shoulders, and for women specifically, covering the head.

UBUDIAH MOSQUE, PERAK

One of the most regal mosques on our list, Ubudiah Mosque in the royal town of Kuala Kangsar in Perak, is steeped in history. Commissioned by Sultan Idris Murshidul'Adzam Shah I in the early 1900s, it was designed by Arthur Benison Hubback, the same architect (or draftsman, as the job was known then) behind many iconic buildings in pre-independence Malaya. Its golden onion domes together with its keyhole arches and Corinthian columns are synonymous with the Indo-Saracenic design favoured at that time.

Visiting Hours: 10am-5pm.

Admission: Free

JAMEK MOSQUE, KUALA LUMPUR

Another architectural masterpiece by A.B. Hubback, the iconic Masjid Jamek or Masjid Sultan Abdul Samad sits at the very heart of the nation's capital. Bearing a design that leans heavily on Mughal architectural styles, this century-old building takes pride of place at the confluence of the Klang and Gombak rivers. Recent excavation work undertaken during revitalisation under the area's Blue River project unearthed steps leading directly down towards both rivers' edges.

Visiting Hours: 8.30am-12.30pm & 2.30pm-4.30pm.

Closed on Fridays.

Admission: Free

TUANKU MIZAN ZAINAL ABIDIN MOSQUE, PUTRAJAYA

Known colloquially as The Iron Mosque and officiated by Malaysia's 13th Agong, after whom the mosque is named, the striking steel lattice work and commanding iron vaults make this mosque stand out among the many stunning buildings in the administrative capital of Putrajaya. Among its most striking features is its mihrab wall. Constructed from a 13 metre high glass panel, it has been designed to create the illusion of Quranic verses floating mid-air, and is quite breathtaking.

Visiting Hours: Saturday-Thursday, 9am-12pm, 2pm-4pm & 5.30pm-6pm;

Friday, 3pm-4.30pm & 5.30pm-6pm.

Admission: Free

ZAHIR MOSQUE, KEDAH

This jewel of the Kedah state capital, Alor Setar, was completed in 1912 and is widely regarded as one of the most beautiful mosques in the world. Its most prominent feature is its five domes which symbolise the five pillars of Islam. Besides that, Zahir Mosque's sturdy structure draws its strength from its 261 pillars, which collectively present a visual feast for visitors. If time permits, sit in meditation and admire the exquisite calligraphy, geometric motifs and Arabesque patterns around the interior walls and dome.

Visiting Hours: Anytime outside of prayer time.

MELAKA STRAITS MOSQUE, MELAKA

In a city celebrated for its historic buildings, the Melaka Straits Mosque or Masjid Selat Melaka is a relatively recent addition to the architectural landscape. Officially opened in late 2006, its choice of location underlines the importance of the sea channel in the economic and cultural growth of the state. Constructed on a man-made island facing the sea, the onset of the tide gives it the appearance of floating on the surface of the water. It also draws on its surroundings for inspiration; its minarets are similar in design to a lighthouse, while giant arches, located on each side of the building, are decorated with stained glass in various shades of sea blue and green that reflect light beautifully, especially during sunrise and sunset.

Visiting Hours: Anytime outside of prayer time.

SABAH STATE MOSQUE, SABAH

The contemporary Sabah State Mosque in Kota Kinabalu was built in the 1970s and is the brainchild of architects from three different nations – Malaysia, Italy and Egypt – who joined forces to create this holy house of wonder. The mosque's gold and white colour theme is seen beautifully on its 16 golden domed towers, and the honeycomb pattern that adorns the main dome flows throughout the interior, playfully casting shadows into the main prayer hall.

Visiting Hours: Monday-Thursday, 8am-11am & 2pm-4.30pm;

Friday, 8am-10.30am & 2.30pm-4.30pm;

Saturday-Sunday, 8am-11am & 2pm-4pm.

Admission: Free, but visitors must report to the information counter before entering.

SULTAN IBRAHIM JAMEK MOSQUE, JOHOR

Built in 1927, the Sultan Ibrahim Jamek Mosque is the oldest house of prayer in the quaint riverside town of Muar. This pastel blue and white building has a design heavily inspired by colonial architecture. Its structure is the perfect combination of East meets West, with a water fountain feature in the centre courtyard for the faithful to perform wudu (body purification) before prayer.

Visiting Hours: Anytime outside of prayer time.

CRYSTAL MOSQUE, TERENGGANU

Terengganu on the East Coast of Peninsula Malaysia is a beautiful state, but its pride and joy is its Crystal Mosque. A spectacular exhibit of mirrors and steel, this miraculous place of prayer gleams in the Kuala Terengganu sunlight during the day and is a sight to behold at night when lit up. Opened in 2008, its impressive facilities are every bit as futuristic as its contemporary Moorish and Gothic design. Among its conveniences is built-in WiFi to enable worshippers to read the Quran electronically. Truly a mosque for the modern age.

Visiting Hours: Monday-Thursday, 10am-7pm; Friday-Sunday, 9am-7pm.

Closed for Friday prayers from 11.30am-2.30pm.

Admission: RM20 for adults, RM10 for children.

Festive Feasts

We break down the best of Hari Raya food, from traditional savoury dishes to desserts that will bring the entire kampung to your doorstep.

The annual celebration of Hari Raya Aidilfitri brings loved ones together, with food being an integral part of the festivities. The camaraderie usually begins during the preparation the night before as families come together to cook the many dishes that have become seasonal staples. Recipes get passed down through the generations this way, as many of these dishes have a long and rich history that transcends cookbooks.

RENDANG

This Malaysian favourite can be eaten with almost anything. Traditionally made using beef and sometimes chicken, rendang is a classic Malay fare, with some variation depending on where you're from. For example, the increase in vegetarian and vegan diets and interest in healthy options has recently given rise to versions made with unripe jackfruit and mushrooms.

One particularly well-known version is Rendang Tok which hails from Perak and was once served only to the royal family. A drier version of the dish with a longer cooking time can be kept for weeks without refrigeration. The meat is marinated with dry spices for a couple of hours and added to sautéed spices that include lemongrass, ginger and shallots. To amp up the flavours, coconut milk and palm sugar are added, and everything is cooked on a slow heat for up to four hours till the meat is tender.

LONTONG / LODEH

While lontong is often regarded as a traditional Johorean breakfast dish, some households will serve it up during Hari Raya celebrations.

Consisting of compressed rice cakes diced into cubes and swimming in a luscious lodeh broth, the dish is presented with a spicy peanut sauce sambal for an unexpected but welcomed fiery kick.

Still, it's the broth that truly makes this dish sing made with coconut milk and a plethora of vegetables. Pounded turmeric, galangal, dried shrimp and lemongrass are sautéed till fragrant, before veggies like cabbage and carrots, and plant proteins such as tofu skin and tempeh are added. The final step is to add freshly squeezed coconut milk to the mix. The entire concoction is then left to simmer over a medium heat, and poured over the rice cakes when ready to serve.

LEMANG

Lemang or glutinous rice cooked in cylindrical bamboo stalks is a much favoured Hari Raya dish that brings families and neighbours together. Cooking this traditional delicacy requires time and effort, which is why the process is usually a big family affair with everyone chipping in to help.

First, the bamboo stalks are cleaned and lined with banana leaves. Then, glutinous rice that has been soaked is stuffed until compact inside the bamboo. Finally, coconut milk with a pinch salt is poured into the bamboo, which is then roasted by an open fire for up to four hours. The bamboo has to be monitored and turned regularly so that the rice inside is evenly cooked, and everyone usually takes turns to do this.

WAJIK

Rich, brown and glistening with inherent sweetness, wajik is a traditional dessert mainly served at formal events like weddings and celebrations, and is actually quite simple to make.

The trick to a good wajik is to first soak the glutinous rice for a couple of hours before steaming. In a separate pan, palm sugar is cooked with water until it caramelises, then coconut milk and pandan leaves are added for fragrance. Once that concoction is stirred to a thick and shiny consistency, the glutinous rice is introduced and the laborious task of mixing it evenly begins. When everything is evenly coated, the mix is patted down on a sheet pan and left to cool before it is cut into convenient bite-sized pieces.

KETUPAT

Not unlike lemang, ketupat is also a dish typically made with help from many people. This is due to the time-consuming process of weaving strips of young coconut tree fronds or palas leaves into the diamond-shaped casings that are used to contain the washed and dried uncooked rice grains. The trick of course is to only fill these eco-friendly containers 60 percent as this will allow the rice to expand while cooking. The ketupat are then boiled for about four to five hours.

Ketupat is usually made with white rice while the ketupat palas, which is more commonly prepared in the northern parts of Peninsula Malaysia especially in Kedah and Perlis, is cooked with glutinous rice and coconut milk similar to the lemang.

KUIH SEMPERIT

It doesn't get any more old school than kuih semperit. Made from cookie dough that is piped into a variety of shapes and decorated with a bit of candied cherry or rainbow sprinkles, the most recognisable among them is a simple rectangular version and the flower-shaped Kuih Dahlia.

To achieve the biscuit's much loved soft buttery texture, cornflour, custard flour and wheat flour is whisked with butter, sugar and eggs. 15 to 20 minutes after baking in a hot oven, the results ought to speak for themselves - a buttery biscuit that's hard to say no to.

PINEAPPLE TARTS

Pineapple tarts come in a diverse range of shapes: there are the open-faced ones that come with a dollop of sweet pineapple jam on top; and the roll type with the jam stuffed inside the pastry to offer a tantalising peek of the golden filling spilling out from either side. Yet common to all is that they are impossible to resist.

With pastry made from flour, sugar and eggs, the jam is simply a reduction of chopped pineapple cooked with sugar, lemon juice and cloves. A good practice is to rest the pastry dough in the fridge for an hour before rolling it out. Once the biscuits are shaped to your liking and filled, the pastry is brushed with a whisked egg. Pop them in the oven for 20 minutes until golden brown.

KUIH MAKMUR

Another sweet treat that's a favourite during the festivities is kuih makmur. A crumbly biscuit dusted with icing sugar, it is made with only four ingredients. Mixed by hand, flour and clarified butter or ghee are formed into a dough and kneaded into small circular pieces. Once stuffed with ground peanuts, each piece is rolled into a ball before baking. It's only after these freshly baked goodies are cooled that the bite-sized spheres are dusted with icing sugar and served up to the delight of visitors.

Post-festive fit

How to bounce back and get fabulously fit.

Image by istockphoto

Whatever the time of year, the festive season is one of family, friends and food, you don't have to feel bad about indulging and spending quality time with the ones you love. After all, it's what makes life worth living. The important thing is re-establishing balance. Here's how to lose that post-holiday paunch.

Belly fat is one of the hardest to shift, but it's important to try, not just for aesthetic reasons but because it can increase your risk of cardiovascular disease and Type 2 diabetes. Shifting that blubber takes a three-pronged approach, all of which are achievable.

EAT WISELY

Festive periods are when you're more likely to throw dietary caution to the wind. Here's how to return to a more sensible diet.

□ Reprogramme your belly

Though the holidays may be short, it can set you up for some long-term bad behaviours as overeating can cause your stomach's stretch receptors to be less sensitive to feeling full sooner. Short bouts of controlled fasting can help (do seek a doctor's advice before you decide to do this), but making the decision to go easy on the eats is a good step. Control portions by eating at a table from a plate, so you always know how much you're putting away, and resist the urge for seconds unless they're healthy vegetables and lean proteins.

□ Clear out the cupboards

You know the drill – eat more vegetables, consume more filling fibre and reduce your fat intake. Start by giving away any leftover Raya cookies; swap them out for healthier snack alternatives like edamame and sweet corn.

□ Avoid the fryer

Proteins are satisfying to eat but instead of frying up your chicken or fish, drop unnecessary calories by steaming or roasting them instead. In fact try and minimise your consumption of deep-fried goods.

□ Kick-start your metabolism

Increasing age and changes in your diet can reduce your metabolic efficiency. To kick it into high gear and burn calories faster, always start your day with a solid breakfast such as half-boiled eggs on toast, have a spicy lunch – the capsaicin in chillies and peppers increases metabolism – and enjoy that cup of tea or coffee; both are a central nervous stimulant that can jolt metabolic rate. Better yet have it black or with soy or almond milk.

□ Cut down on your sugar intake

Fat used to be the enemy but research increasingly demonstrates the dangers of excessive sugar intake. Cut down on sugary drinks like sodas, swap your cakes and doughnuts for fresh fruit and tau foo fa (which is a protein), and opt for fresh coconut water instead of sweet isotonic sports drinks.

BURN THAT FAT

Social commitments like visiting relatives often mean putting off more active pursuits for something sedentary. Spot exercises like crunching and sit-ups tone abdominal muscles but you won't see your hard-earned abs unless you burn the fat that's hiding it. At least 20 minutes of aerobic exercise 3 times a week is important when you're trying to shed excess fat around the midriff. But exercise, particularly on your own, can get repetitive fast and it's easy to lose interest. Here's how to stay active.

□ Positive reinforcement

There's nothing more motivating than seeing positive results. Even if you don't enjoy the gym, sign up for a short-term contract and get a personal trainer who will make sure you keep your appointments and will vary up your routine for the next three to six months until you're motivated enough to strike out on your own.

□ Buddy up

Find an exercise buddy or two. When cancelling a running session means letting down a friend, you're less likely to hit the snooze button or WhatsApp a "can't make it" message. Can't find one because of conflicting schedules and varied interests? Join a Bootcamp or a fitness or sports group on Meetup.com. This not only takes the onus off you to organise your exercise, but the social aspect of joining a group with shared interests will keep you coming back.

□ Join a class

Whether it's yoga, zumba or spin, fitness classes are held with regularity and thus easily scheduled. Pen it into your diary as you would a meeting. In fact, do treat it like a meeting and whatever arises, insist you have to keep this appointment with yourself. It takes discipline but you're worth it.

□ Learn a skill

Sometimes getting toned and trim isn't enough of a motivator. Focusing on your physical appearance and counting your calories just might not be who you are. In contrast, learning a new skill places the emphasis on mental and physical growth. It's never too late to learn how to play tennis or swim (it could save your life), and you'll be proud of yourself when you gain increasing mastery of your new hobby.

□ Don't weigh yourself

It sounds counterintuitive but the scales can deceive especially if you're building muscle, as muscle weighs more than fat. Besides, there are other ways of measuring your progress, like how your clothing fits. Pick out an item that you love but never quite fit into and slip it on every month. As that snugness starts to loosen up, knowing that you'll be rocking a whole new outfit soon should keep you motivated.

Image by istockphoto

• Set a goal

And make it a big one. If you've just started running, sign up for your first 10km race, then work backwards and map out what you need to do every month to work up to that goal. Run 3 kilometres in the first month, push for 5 kilometres in the second month, and throw in some fun runs to keep you on your toes. Reach for 7 kilometres in the third month and before you know it you're hitting the 10 kilometres mark comfortably.

• Video your progress

If you're learning a new sport or physical skill, video your progress. It's easy to overlook the gains you make. Looking back on the footage – especially of yourself doing things you wouldn't have imagined you'd be capable of when you started your journey – will remind you of how far you've come. This is especially important when you feel you've plateaued.

• Walk it out

In hot humid Malaysia this isn't so easy, but when it's convenient leave your Honda at the office and take an MRT or bus to your next meeting. Walking between destinations and taking the stairs add physical activity where there previously wasn't any, the effects of which will accumulate over time.

• It only takes 20 minutes

One way to fit exercise into your life is to schedule it, the other is to be realistic about how much time you can spare. Consistency is key – 20 minutes of cardio 3 times a week is more effective than pulling off two hours in the gym in infrequent bursts. To get your heart rate up, try squats and burpees. HIIT, or high-intensity interval training, which can be completed in 20 minutes combines cardio and strength training to torch fat and increase muscle mass in a double whammy.

TONE IT UP

5 different ways to plank

As you shed fat, you'll want to firm up those abdominal muscles. Planking is a terrific way to do that. Here's why:

- A basic plank and its variations are easy to remember.
- You can perform a plank anywhere, no special equipment is required.
- Though strenuous, it doesn't involve leaping and jumping, so it doesn't place too much stress on the joints, and can be adapted for people with painful wrists or ankles.

BASIC BENT ARM PLANK

Stretch out, face down with your elbows and knees on the floor, legs together. Lift up, raising your knees off the ground so you are on your toes and maintain a straight line from your head down to your ankles by engaging your core. Hold the pose for 15 seconds, then rest for ten seconds. Repeat 3 times. As your core strength increases, you can hold for longer periods of time in increments of 15 seconds.

The slightly harder basic straight arm plank can be executed with arms straight and palms on the ground, directly below the shoulders.

SIDE PLANK

Stretch out sideways. Keeping your elbow directly underneath your shoulder, lift up using your elbow and right leg as support. Your knees should be together, one leg stacked on top of the other, left arm running along your left side. Maintain a straight but diagonal line from your head to the bottom of your feet and use your core to stop your hip from sagging towards the ground. As in the basic plank, hold for 15 seconds, rest for 10. Repeat 3 times, then flip and do the same on the other side.

PLANK WITH BOSU BALL

Up the ante and perform your plank with a bosu ball placed underneath your arms or palms. As you try to maintain your balance, you'll engage your abs and obliques.

PLANK TWIST

Adopt a straight arm plank position. In a controlled manner, slowly bend your right knee up towards your left arm by turning your hips, before bringing your leg back to its original position. Switch sides and repeat, working up from 3 sets of 5 to 10 reps as you improve.

Image by istockphoto

Form is everything with a plank, otherwise you can hurt your back. So when starting out use a mirror or have a friend spot you.

Redefining The Recycled

In a time when metal straws are gaining traction among the environmentally friendly, many brands are doing their part to come up with products that are kind to Mother Earth. From furniture to fashion, here are some companies that are blazing the trail to a more sustainable consumer lifestyle.

We should all aspire to sustainable living, and while adopting a zero-waste lifestyle is ideal to strive for, there are other approaches we can take to help preserve the environment.

One of the ways we as consumers can tread lighter upon the earth is to purchase products that have been made from recycled or upcycled materials. Wood, plastic and even seat belts can be transformed into innovative products. Just check out these creative companies for ideas and inspiration.

HARITH GREEN CARPENTER (HGC)

CEO Harith Ridzuan leads a team of second-generation family members at Harith Green Carpenter, creating cool furniture, kitchenware and décor items. As 'green carpenters', the team creates these uniquely designed pieces out of upcycled materials like wood and steel. HGC's stools, office tables and cabinets have turned up in many hipster cafés, showcasing the baby steps businesses are taking to reduce waste. In 2016, Harith founded Dapo, which creates sustainable kitchenware from PEFC-certified woods. Their items include attractive wood chopping boards and serving trays.

Available at

PROJECT WOODWORK

The people behind Project Woodwork don't just build timber-based accessories, they craft them. Strap on their Prime 1.1.0 Watch. Fashioned from sustainable walnut wood, bezels come in light and dark wood, and its interchangeable NATO straps in jewel-toned colours of burgundy and forest green. Project Woodwork gets bonus points as everything apart from the wood is reusable and recyclable.

BIJI-BIJI DESIGN

Ethical fashion can still be chic, as evidenced by the products from Biji-Biji Design. The folks behind the brand upcycle discarded materials like banners, felt and even seat belts to create stylish items for everyday use. Its bestseller, the Seat Belt Bag is handcrafted locally using seat belts that turn into clutches and totes. Similarly PVC advertising banners, rather than being discarded into landfills, have been reimagined as pencil cases and bags. Creatively speaking, the sky is the limit. The Biji-Biji x Nakakoma Orimono collection saw vintage kimonos woven with seat belts to create one-of-kind carry alls. Clever.

ART OF TREE

Salvaged trees are given new life by the husband-and-wife team that founded furniture brand Art of Tree. Tastefully designed, the functional pieces are built out of fallen urban trees like acacia, mahogany and catappa; its natural beauty retained by showcasing the timber slab's exposed edges and grains. Usually discarded for its cracked cavities, these are instead filled with resin, transforming repurposed pieces of wood into functional furniture such as coffee and dining tables that double up as pieces of art for your home.

Opening hours: Tuesday-Sunday, 10am-7pm.

THE GREEN HIJAB

If you've been paying attention to social media, you'll know that plastic is the environment's primary enemy. Thankfully technology has allowed us to turn plastic bottles into fabrics that can then be turned into a variety of products including headscarves. The Green Hijab brand will even pack your hijab in eco-friendly packaging and ship the items in recycled and biodegradable boxes printed using soy ink. If modest fashion is part of your wardrobe, it will be reassuring to know that one of these stylish pieces equates to saving up to two post-consumer plastic bottles.

RECRO

If you love furniture with a rustic mid-century charm or the clean lines of the Scandinavian design aesthetic, jazz up your living space with upcycled furniture from Recro. Many of their pieces feature neat geometric shapes and have cushions in loud funky patterns. Their speciality is making items from teak wood, with the option of creating a customised design using recycled teak. Also offered are restoration and reupholstery services if you want to spruce up an old piece and make it new again, so you can reduce through reuse.

Available at

53/53A, Lorong Rahim Kajai 13, Taman Tun Dr. Ismail, Kuala Lumpur.

Opening hours: Tuesday-Saturday, 11am-5.30pm; Sunday, 12pm-5pm.

Grand Designs

Dato' Rizalman Ibrahim wears a lot of hats in the world of design, but his true face is that of a man whose passion is for fashion and family.

Fashion folks are a fiery lot, but Malaysian designer Dato' Rizalman Ibrahim burns brighter and hotter than most. He's supremely creative, extremely hard on himself and he's constantly on the move to find the next big thing. In this interview, he talks about what inspires his work and what keeps him honest in everything he does.

As someone with diverse creative avenues – fashion, interior design, weddings – what are the things that move you?

I have a strong passion in every creative avenue I'm involved in. And from that passion, I do things with sincerity and honesty, hence everything can be easier. Of course, healthy competition is also a factor in making me stronger than ever.

ID was your first love and fashion came later. How have you adapted your dreams and aspirations along the way?

As a designer, I'm constantly developing my creativity and finding new inspiration. This requires me to be versatile and ever-evolving. I'm a lover of aesthetics and interior design, as well as fashion. I hold both of that in the highest regard. Therefore, it makes sense for me to pursue both of these simultaneously.

Looking back on 25 years, if you could tell yourself something important at any time, what would you say?

Passion and integrity pays off! In 25 years, I've learned that no matter how much I have been able to achieve, it only serves as a higher benchmark to succeed.

Malaysian style has had fleeting moments on international runways. What's holding it back from breaking through?

The lack of originality. We don't have to look much further than our traditional silhouettes to get inspired. I've reworked and reimagined the baju kebaya and baju kurung – the basis of so many of my luxurious designs. Referencing the classics and breathing new life into it, I think that would stun on both local and international runways.

On a professional and personal level, what does Hari Raya mean to you and how will you celebrate it this year?

Hari Raya is a celebration for one month of fasting, when we observe our duties. It's also a celebration of myself, and for resting to the fullest with my family.

What are your upcoming projects for Hari Raya and the rest of the year?

Currently, I am focused on our Hari Raya collection for 2019, and my interior design business which is going tremendously well.

The annual Rizalman for ZALORA collection, part of 2018 ZALORAYA, features over 100 outfits inspired by Jaipur, the capital of India's Rajasthan state. The women's range includes sarees, lehenga-meets-baju kurung hybrids and curated embellishments. The campaign features Malaysian starlet Izara Aishah and marks the designer's sixth year with the online fashion destination. There's also a RizalMen collection with kurtas, baju Melayu, sampin and jubah, all available at zalora.com.my.

Honda Highlights at the Malaysia Autoshow

Honda attracts more than 6,000 visitors at the recent 2018 Malaysia Autoshow, with exclusive test drives of Honda SENSING™ and Hybrid models.

The 2018 Malaysia Autoshow, powered by the Malaysian Automotive Institute, unveiled a futuristic theme highlighting automotive products under the theme of 'Connected Mobility' at the Malaysia Agro Exposition Park Serdang (MAEPS), from 26th to 29th April 2018.

More than 100 models were displayed at the main halls, with a wide range of activities including test drives, safety demonstrations and even go-karting offered over the four-day event. The first-hand experiences were certainly favoured by shoppers looking for an opportunity to test drive a wider selection of models at the same venue.

The showcase by Honda Malaysia this year attracted more than 6,000 visitors to its area, one of the biggest exhibitors at the auto show. Visitors could get up close with the complete Honda family line-up and have a better understanding of its advanced technologies, including the coveted red badge, the Civic Type R.

The Honda SENSING™ is without a doubt a key priority for Honda Malaysia at the showcase as it steps up its efforts globally to achieve a collision-free mobile society. Not only could visitors learn how it works through a driving simulator but they could also sign up for the Honda SENSING™ demonstration held outdoors.

The demonstration delivered a real-world experience behind the wheels as the Honda SENSING™ technology intelligently detected the cruising range between cars and assisted the driver in adjusting its gap from the car ahead.

Honda's attractive line-up resulted in a total of 73 bookings made by the end of the four-day auto show. Building on the positive response, Honda will continue to offer quality products and strengthen its after-sales service to customers.

Malaysia's Advanced Safety Technology

Honda SENSING™ is a comprehensive safety suite designed to revolutionise the Honda driving experience.

“What really impresses me is the Adaptive Cruise Control with Low Speed Follow, which is the most wonderful thing for town driving. It just adjusts the speed to maintain a safe gap.”
– Chips Yap, Managing Editor of Motor Trader

Honda has been consistently pushing boundaries in innovation and technology, optimising not only performance and fuel in all vehicles but making advanced safety technology more accessible every year.

The Honda SENSING™, a suite of safety technologies, is currently available in the Accord, CR-V and Odyssey by Honda Malaysia. The active safety technology is designed to assist drivers through a combination of features, namely Forward Collision Warning (FCW), Collision Mitigation Braking System (CMBS), Lane Departure Warning (LDW), Road Departure Mitigation (RDM), Adaptive Cruise Control (ACC), Low Speed Follow (LSF)*, and Lane Keep Assist System (LKAS).

The advanced system uses a monocular camera and millimetre wave radar to detect the vehicle's surroundings in real time. For example, a car equipped with Honda SENSING™ is able to detect risky driving behaviours, whether it is an obstructing object or unintended swerving out of the lane. If the system detects danger, the driver will be alerted through audio and visual warnings, including sending a vibration signal through the steering wheel.

“Usually in most cars, Lane Keep Assist System will actually stop you from switching lanes, but this system can tell when you are willfully doing something or distracted. I’m impressed by how it has been finely tuned.”
– Hans Cheong, Head of Content at Carlist.my

The advancements made by Honda SENSING™ are a step forward from conventional safety features and would benefit anyone who is on the road often, especially with passengers in the car. Features like ACC and LSF* make driving on highways remarkably easier and more convenient, while FCW and CMBS reduce collision impact, although the driver-assistive system should not be used to replace negligent driving behaviour.

Honda SENSING™ has not only received favourable reviews in the press but owners themselves have been praising its efficiency in keeping them safe. According to Mr. Lim Heng Yee who’s been driving the latest CR-V, Honda SENSING™ gives him the added security that he seeks. “I have been using it on highways a lot and as someone who’s driven many other models before, including an older CR-V, you can feel a big improvement in safety. For example, you will get alerted whether you’re swerving off your lane or too close to the car in front. It’s a very advanced feature,” he shares.

Meanwhile, another customer feels assured that his Accord is equipped with the advanced safety features should he ever need it. “I like the fact that you can turn them on when you need them, so it’s non-intrusive for the driver. I’m not always using it as I’m still trying to get accustomed to it,” says Mr. You Chee Keong.

Globally, Honda has announced plans to equip Honda SENSING™ in almost all its upcoming models, making safety a top priority as it continues to make advancements in realising a collision-free society, where vehicle occupants and pedestrians can all share the road with peace of mind.

Honda and Incredibles 2

Everyone’s favourite family of superheroes is back! In “Incredibles 2,” Helen (aka Elastigirl) is called on to lead a campaign to bring Supers back, while Bob (aka Mr. Incredible) navigates the day-to-day heroics of “normal” life at home with the kids – Violet, Dash and baby Jack-Jack, whose superpowers are about to be discovered. Their lives are derailed when a new villain emerges with a brilliant and dangerous plot that threatens everything. But the Parrs don’t shy away from a challenge, especially with Frozone by their side – that is what makes this family so Incredible.

Honda Malaysia is offering you a chance to win Honda SENSING™ and Disney/Pixar’s “Incredibles 2” exclusive merchandise. Test drive any Honda SENSING™ vehicle at any Honda Authorised Dealer near you from 11th June to 8th July 2018 and stand a chance to win incredible premiums.

Disney/Pixar’s “Incredibles 2” busts into cinemas on 14th June 2018.

Honda Pride Front Liners

Hundreds of Honda Service Advisors don the white uniform and Honda Pride badge each day. Is there more beyond the symbol of service?

The origins of “Honda Pride” principles lie in the Three Joys of Honda, which sets the standard of conduct for the Joy of Buying, Joy of Selling and Joy of Creating. This philosophy not only forms the basis for all company activities but also forms the foundation for ownership experience.

At Honda Malaysia, “Honda Pride” occurs as part of the After Sales ownership experience. Each of our Service Advisors knows the fundamental principles thoroughly and is always available to assist every customer as soon as they walk in.

We asked Yong Kah Kin, a Service Advisor in Sumber Auto, Petaling Jaya, what it takes to serve customers with Honda Pride. “For me, it is about greeting every customer like a friend and listening attentively to their concerns. After three years on the job, I find that being informed and knowledgeable really helps when communicating with customers,” he shares.

Others in a similar role describe Honda Pride as the ability to accurately and promptly attend to customers. Having just been awarded Honda’s Best Service Advisor in 2017, Mohandass Angamuthu of Tiong Nam Motor in Setia Alam says, “Whether it is a problem or complaint, we have to be thorough in our investigation and make them feel heard and understood. Then try to imagine yourself in their shoes and keep any inconveniences to a minimum.”

A good listening ear goes a long way, as reiterated by Penjerick Bin Sobungku who has been a Service Advisor at Weemaju Automotive, Sabah, for two years. “For example, a customer was upset that no one could help her find the parts for her car even after one year. She came to us with her grievances and we managed to obtain parts replacement for her within a week,” he shares.

“I have been with Honda for three years now and have trained myself to face each customer with a smile, regardless of the situation,” enthuses Jaya Noor Sasilawaty. “We do deal with customers a lot but we also collaborate as a team to solve bigger issues and help each other when we can. Ultimately it all serves to improve our customers’ experience.”

Meanwhile, Nur Amin from Honda Botanic Auto Mall, Klang earned his first 5-star review in less than six months. “I was surprised when I saw the customer’s feedback on Google and he even mentioned my name! Having good work ethics has been my guiding principle. I like to make sure the day’s issues are solved before I leave work and ensure my customers don’t return with the same problem,” he shares.

Jennifer Tham of Ban Lee Heng, Seremban, who has been upholding the Honda Pride for seven years with several awards to her name, agrees that a strong work ethic leads to a high quality service. “Be the first to arrive at work and the last to leave because a big part of the job is ensuring that you leave no problems unsolved, that includes managing customers’ appointments and following up with them,” she says.

A Customer Has Walked Away With a Brand New Jazz!

Honda Malaysia celebrates the festive season with abundance by rewarding customers through an 'SMS & WIN' contest.

Honda Malaysia is pleased to announce that a loyal customer, Ms. Hasmawati Bt Hussin, is the proud Grand Prize winner of the recently concluded 'SMS & WIN' contest organised in conjunction with Chinese New Year this year.

The contest, held from 22nd January to 11th March 2018, garnered more than 43,000 submissions and resulted in more than 1,006 Honda owners winning various prizes worth a total of RM198,255. The prizes included a Honda Jazz, iPhone X and Bank Simpanan (BSN) Premium Savings Certificates.

Ms. Hasmawati, a Honda City owner, is beyond thrilled to have won the Grand Prize. "I was truly surprised when I received the exciting news. I have always loved the spaciousness and sporty look of the Jazz, especially the stylish Lunar Silver Metallic colour," she said.

Speaking at the ceremony, Managing Director and Chief Executive Officer of Honda Malaysia, Mr. Toichi Ishiyama said, "I would like to extend my appreciation to all participants of this campaign and congratulate all winners. We look forward to achieving more milestones together."

The Destination for Riders

Honda BigWing opens its doors so fans of Honda Big Bikes can get an exclusive viewing experience and state-of-the-art service.

Designed as the ultimate “destination for riders”, the first Honda BigWing by Boon Siew Honda (BSH) has finally opened at Ee Tiong Motorsports Sdn Bhd, Setapak. The concept sales and service centre caters specifically for Honda Big Bike models (250cc and above) and is aimed at engaging the biker community through a premium, state-of-the-art showroom.

Ee Tiong Motorsports is the first dealership to inaugurate the Honda BigWing sales and service centre due to its strategic location in Kuala Lumpur and large customer base. The 5,535 square foot outlet includes a service centre, parts and accessories corner, and a sophisticated customer lounge. The unique experience is sure to excite fans and owners alike.

The launch of the first Honda BigWing took place in conjunction with the MotoGP Winter Test, with more than 100 BSH customers invited to the Sepang Circuit for a track experience and a chance to meet world champion MotoGP riders like Carl Crutchlow, Jorge Lorenzo and Dani Pedrosa.

Invited guests were also treated to a sneak preview of the much anticipated X-ADV, 2018 Honda CRF1000L Africa Twin and CB1000R, which are now available in Malaysia, with two other models targeted for release by the second half of the year.

“The community of big bike riders in Malaysia is growing and we are excited to expand our network by opening more Honda BigWing centres this year in Penang, Selangor and Johor,” said Mr. Nobuhide Nagata, Managing Director and Chief Executive Officer of BSH. “We are optimistic this will help increase Honda Big Bike sales by 30%,” he added.

Aside from being the new place to reveal Big Bike models, fans and owners can also expect regular activities like convoys, gatherings and world-class events to be offered at Honda BigWing outlets. There will also be no shortage of exclusive privileges, especially through the complimentary Honda BigWing Member Card that allows customers to enjoy special discounts and service assistance.

Following the opening, Honda brought the BigWing road show experience to Mid Valley Megamall, Kuala Lumpur, and will soon be at Sunway Carnival Mall, Penang, from 12th to 15th July 2018. More dates will be announced, as the road show will travel to Petaling Jaya and Johor Bahru in November 2018 and January 2019 respectively, so be sure not to miss it if you are nearby.

Please call 03-4023 6192 to make an appointment or visit Honda BigWing Setapak at No. 384, 386, 388, 390, Jalan Pahang, Setapak, Kuala Lumpur, or find them on Facebook as “HondaBigWingSetapak”.
